Hedley Studios tells us…

(All words and photographs from Hedley Studios).

We thought that Wheels-Alive readers might enjoy the meeting of historic character and present-day craftsmanship: a newly built electric Bentley that preserves the visual detail and open-air appeal of the 1929 Blower.

Our first 25 production Bentley Blower Jnrs are complete and on their way to customers. We brought them together for the new photographs below…

Created with Bentley Motors, the car is an 85%-scale electric reinterpretation of the 1929 Blower. Only 349 cars will be built worldwide. In the UK market, the vehicle is road legal as delivered from the factory and needs only local registration.

Beneath the period bodywork is a carbon fibre tub on a steel frame; construction more usually associated with much more expensive hypercars and race cars. The Comfort, Bentley and Sport driving modes echo those of full-size Bentleys.

The lineup deliberately echoes the 25 Porsche 917s assembled for homologation in April 1969 — a little nod to another Le Mans legend.
