10 Driving Offences and their Punishments

Speeding

The most common driving offence in the UK.

Points: Usually 3

Fine: Usually £100.00

If a driver is caught exceeding the limit by a small margin, they may be issued a verbal warning instead.

On the other hand, if a driver is caught driving more than 10% over the limit, the police have the power to issue a fixed penalty notice, which usually results in 3 points and a £100 fine on the spot.

Using your mobile phone

Police are increasingly using in-car video cameras to record the driver.

Points: 6

Fine: £200 (variable fines)

The driver could also get a ban, which might result in a driving ban of 3 to 6 months.

Careless driving

Also known as driving without due care and attention, careless driving is a broad term that covers many types of driving offences.

Points: Usually 3

Fine: On the spot £100 (fine)

A careless driver can be issued with a fixed penalty of 3 points and a £100 fine on the spot.

If a driver is caught driving carelessly, they will be issued with a fixed penalty of 3 points and a £100 fine on the spot.

Dangerous Driving

Dangerous driving is a more serious offence than careless driving. It involves driving in a way that is dangerous to other road users.

Points: Decided by the Magistrates' Court or Crown Court

Fine: Decided by the Magistrates' Court or Crown Court

Dangerous driving offences will be dealt with by the Magistrates' Court or Crown Court.

Drink Driving

The legal limit for drinking is 50 micrograms of alcohol per 100 millilitres of blood.

Points: Decided by the Magistrates' Court

Fine: Decided by the Magistrates' Court

The driver could also get a driving ban of 3 to 6 months.

Drug Driving

Use of drugs while driving can be a serious offence.

Points: Decided by the Magistrates' Court

Fine: Decided by the Magistrates' Court

The driver could also get a driving ban of 3 to 6 months.

Driving without insurance

Every driver is required to have third party insurance.

Points: 6

Fine: Possible penalty of £300

The driver could also get a driving ban of 3 to 6 months.

Having the incorrect/unsuitable or incorrectly fitted car seat for your child

Getting the right car seat for your child is essential for their safety.

Points: NA

Fine: Police can impose a £30 fixed penalty, but the maximum fine is £500 if a parent is caught.

Parents should also be aware that if a child is caught in a car seat that is not suitable for their age, weight and height, they could be issued with a £300 fine.

Driving otherwise than in accordance with a licence

Driving a vehicle that you are not licensed to drive is a serious offence.

Points: Decided by the Magistrates' Court

Fine: Decided by the Magistrates' Court

The driver could also get a driving ban of 3 to 6 months.

Driving without an MOT

The MOT test is a compulsory test of a vehicle's safety, security and emissions.

Points: None

Fine: £100.00 on the spot

The government will be aware of the vehicle's status in the MOT test.

Ten Driving Offences and their Punishments in the U.K.

There are numerous offences that can be committed whilst driving, most of which incur a fine or, in the case of drink driving or dangerous driving, the loss of a licence and even imprisonment.

OSV believes it's important to understand the driving laws - and the punishments if the laws are broken. They have therefore created an infographic looking at ten of the most common driving offences in the UK and the typical punishments given if they are broken...

1. Breaking the speed limit

If you go above the speed limit set down for a specific area, you can be fined and have points added to your licence. If you are only a few miles over the limit, you may well get away with having to attend a speed awareness course as punishment. In normal speeding cases, however, you should expect to get the minimum of three points on your licence and a £100 fine.

If you are driving 45% or more over the limit, your case will probably be sent to the magistrate's court where the fine has the potential to be bigger and could even result in an outright driving ban.

2. Using a mobile phone while driving

We all know that driving whilst using a mobile phone is an offence and the police are starting to crack down more seriously on this kind of behaviour. If caught, you will end up with six points on your licence and a £200 roadside fine.

You could also be taken to court under certain circumstances, which can lead to a driving ban and a higher fine of up to £1,000.

3. Careless driving

This means you have been driving without the normal due care and attention one might consider appropriate for a qualified driver. It includes a wide range of offences such as ignoring a red light or tailgating another vehicle. You should expect three points on your licence and a roadside fine of £100 if caught.

When the case is more serious you will have to go to court and could end up losing your licence and receiving as much as a £2,500 fine. If you caused a fatal crash because of your careless driving, you can be fined an unlimited amount, lose your licence and end up in prison for up to five years.

4. Dangerous driving

Dangerous driving is a step up from careless driving and is a behaviour that falls 'far below what would be expected of a competent and careful driver'. This could include driving down the motorway at very high speeds or purposefully undertaking an act that you know to be dangerous. Points and fines for dangerous driving are always decided by the court and depend on the seriousness of the offence.

You could end up with an unlimited fine and be banned from driving as well as spend up to 14 years in jail.

5. Drink driving

Driving while under the influence of alcohol is, of course, against the law. The limit is different in England, Wales and Northern Ireland (80 mg per 100 ml) compared to Scotland (50 mg per 100 ml). The points and fine given out is decided by the magistrates court but in most cases you will face a driving ban.

In more severe cases you can expect a custodial sentence of up to six months and if an accident was caused by your drink driving (including one involving a fatality) you could receive a longer prison sentence of up to 14 years. You may also need to take an extended driving test if you want to finally get your licence back.

6. Drug driving

Police can also test motorists for driving under the influence of drugs. If you are found to be unfit to drive because of taking either prescribed or illegal drugs, the points on your licence and fine will be decided by the magistrate's court. Penalties could include being banned from driving for the minimum of a year, an unlimited fine and even a prison sentence of up to 6 months.

7. Driving without insurance

If you are driving on any public road you need to have insurance. Police can check your car nowadays using automatic number plate recognition cameras and quickly find out if you are covered. For those driving without insurance, expect six points on your licence and an on the spot fine of £300. You will not be able to drive the vehicle once you have been stopped and the police have the power to seize the vehicle you are in.

8. Having an unsuitable or improperly fitted car seat for your child

For children of certain ages, you need to have the right car seat fitted to protect them should you have a crash. If a child is in an inappropriate seat for their age or it has not been properly fitted, you can end up with a fixed penalty fine of £30. If the case goes to court, this can rise to a maximum of £500.

9. Driving in a way that is not compatible with your licence

This covers a wide range of offences and means you're not driving in the way that the licence stipulates. That could include driving without a licence, driving the wrong class of vehicle for your licence, driving whilst you have been disqualified, or even driving a car on a provisional licence without displaying the appropriate L plates.

If caught you can get six points on your licence and be fined up to £1,000. You also risk being disqualified.

10. Driving with no MoT

Once a vehicle is three years old, apart from some older classic cars you need to undertake an MoT for it every year to check that it is roadworthy. Driving when your car is out of MoT can be easily done but can also cost you £100 as an on the spot fine. If the police stop you and find you don't have an MoT and your vehicle is also unroadworthy, the punishment can be worse.
